Introduction to DSpace for new DSpace Administrators

DSpace is organized in a basic top-down hierarchy:

Community

Sub-community

Collection

Ex.

Community= Faculty of Science

Sub-Community= Biology

Collection= Dr. Smith's research papers

You must have Community and a collection, you do not have to have a sub-community.

You can build and organize your communities however you would like. We have found that organizing DSpace to reflect the institution's organizational structure works best.

Files

DSpace can accept any file type, however the Library will only preserve certain file types. Ask for clarification.

Copyright

Most faculty have signed over copyright to the publisher. So you must check this list of Publisher Open Access policies to see if the publisher allows their articles to be deposited and what conditions must be met.

If the publisher is not listed you will have to e-mail them for permission to deposit the article to DSpace. Keep your responses on file for future reference.

URLs

One of the major benefits of the hierarchical structure of DSpace is that each level of the hierarchy has a specific url. Each time you open a new community, sub-community, collection or fulltext file look at the url and use them as needed.

Most people like depositing files in DSpace as a sort of warehouse. They then use the fulltext url in a fancy website, this way users do not have to click through DSpace to find the article.

How to upload files to DSpace

1. Go to your local DSpace homepage

Ex. <http://dspace.ucalgary.ca>

2. Click on My DSpace

The screenshot shows the DSpace homepage for the University of Calgary. The header includes the university logo and the text "UNIVERSITY OF CALGARY Information Resources" and "Institutional Repository". The main content area is divided into several sections:

- Search DSpace: A search box with a "Go" button and a link to "Advanced Search".
- Home: A button labeled "Home".
- Browse: A section with links for "Communities & Collections", "Titles", "Authors", and "By Date".
- Sign on to: A section with links for "Receive email updates", "My DSpace authorized user" (circled in red), and "Edit Profile".
- Help: A link labeled "Help".
- About DSpace: A link labeled "About DSpace".
- Welcome to DSpace: A section with a welcome message and links for more information and publisher policies.
- Search: A section with a search box and a "Go" button.
- Communities in DSpace: A section with a list of communities: "Alberta Gaming Research Institute", "Biological Sciences", "CAPS Institutional Repositories Project", and "Chieftain: the Journal of Traditional Governance".

On the right side, there are three small images showing people working in a library or study area.

3. Log in

The screenshot shows the DSpace login page for the University of Calgary. The header includes the university logo and the text "UNIVERSITY OF CALGARY Information Resources" and "Institutional Repository". The main content area is titled "Log In to DSpace" and includes a "Help..." link.

The login form contains the following elements:

- A link for "New user? Click here to register."
- A message: "Please enter your e-mail address and password into the form below."
- An "E-mail Address:" field with the text "reader@ucalgary.ca".
- A "Password:" field with masked characters.
- A "Log In" button.
- A link for "Have you forgotten your password?".

At the bottom, there is a "W3C XHTML 1.0" logo and a copyright notice: "DSpace Software Copyright © 2002-2005 MIT and Hewlett-Packard - Feedback".
